IN-DEPTH WORKSHOP

*****

Speakers will cover the principles and practices of rice production with the latest information on several important topics.

Enrollment is limited to 75 people, so please enroll early. Seats will be filled on a first-come basis.

Sponsored by the University of California Cooperative Extension to help California rice producers maintain their competitive edge.

The 2009 Rice Production Workshop will be held on March 25th at the Refuge Restaurant in Yuba City. The Workshop, organized by University of California Cooperative Extension (UCCE), aims to present current and potential growers, pest control advisers, industry representatives, regulatory agencies and other interested parties with a broad view of the California rice production system and the most up to date research findings.

Information will be presented by UC Davis and UCCE scientists and extension personnel with many years experience working in California rice. Topics include land preparation, varieties, rice growth and development, water management, crop fertility, and pest management.

To participate in the 2009 Rice Production Workshop, complete the enclosed registration form and mail to the indicated address along with the required payment. For more information, contact Chris Greer (530-822-7515), Cass Mutters (530-538-7201), or Luis Espino (530-458-0578) Farm Advisors, UCCE.
